Class: K2.

Date: March 8, 2024

Activity aims: K 2— Looking for giant pandas in their tracks

Activity goal: By observing the living environment of giant pandas, children can understand the relationship between various characteristics of Sichuan animals and their habitats .

Activity results and suggestions:

Activity content :

By participating in a lecture on giant panda conservation with hand puppet theater about Sichuan animals and their lives in habitats, which also invited children to participate in the performance. Afterwards, the children were guided to visit the giant panda in Ocean Park to have a close observation on, characteristics of the animals and their living habits.

Activity results :

Knowledge and skills : Appreciation of hand puppet theater enhances ecological knowledge of children about Sichuan animals and strengthen their awareness of environmental conservation. visiting the Giant Panda House allows children to observe the characteristics of Sichuan animals more closely and understand their living habits in more detail.

Values and Attitudes : A visit of Giant Panda House can allow children to understand the preciousness of Sichuan animals, improve their awareness of the protection of these rare animals, and cultivate a sense of responsibility for environmental conservation.

Interest in learning : Close observation of animals can increase children's curiosity and enhance learning motivation. By observing real animals' living habits , children 's learning motivation can be improved , making it easier for them to understand the importance of environmental conservation .

Achieve activity aims :activities allow children to understand the relationship between the various physical characteristics of Sichuan animals and their habitats from multiple angles and in a more concrete way through the appreciation of hand puppet theater and observation of the living environment of giant pandas .

Suggestion :

The activity was overall good, and the children could fully understand the different characteristics of Sichuan animals. However , the visiting time should be extended so that children can have more time to observe their lives. In particular, the extended visiting time can make it easier to observe the pandas performing different activities..
